What is SJP?
The Social Justice Activist Program (SJP) is a program designed for undergraduate, graduate, and professional students interested in enhancing their skills in diversity, social justice, and leadership. Participants will engage in one of three, six-week experiential learning experiences to develop the necessary tools and resources needed to live in a diverse environment and work for the betterment of our campus and the global community. SJP program is divided into three levels (Ally, Advocate, and Activist) that builds upon one another and students can sign up and complete the program at their own pace.

Program Goals and Expectations
- Explore the significance of background, culture, privilege and oppression and how it relates to diversity and social justice.
- Examine the roles of an ally, advocate, and activist on our campus and in the global community.
- Discuss and address social issues and concerns about diversity on our campus.
- Explore ideas and foster opportunities to better serve USC and the world.

Apply
This program is free of charge and open to all students at the University of South Carolina. Students can apply at the beginning of the semester for each level. Students must enroll in the ALLY section first before continuing to the others. Applications are now being accepted and may be found at http://bit.ly/SJP1415.
